Certified L&D Professional (CLDP)

applications open 2008Â

Recognising excellence

If you have at least three years' experience and relevant qualifications in L&D, you can apply to become a Certified Learning & Development Professional (CLDP).

ILDP certification is competency-based and will measure your expertise, mastery of job knowledge and capability. You will need to submit authenticated evidence of your knowledge and successful performance against the ILDP's standards in a selection of your recent L&D projects or positions. An independent panel will assess applications.

Benefits of certification

- add CLDP after your name in business correspondence

- post your picture and bio on the ILDP siteÂ

- vote for the ILDP BoardÂ

- nominate for ILDP BoardÂ

- receive discounts for ILDP eventsÂ

- receive support for publishing your materials.

How to apply (available 2008)

There will be a one-off application fee to cover the cost of the assessment process.

Full application details with criteria, templates and guides will be available for download soon from this site.
